

DEATH OF GEORGE PULLMAN A WARNING TO RICH FATHERS

Riotous Career of the Twins Was a Tragic Disappointment to the Doting Millionaire Palace-Car Magnate—An Old Man at Thirty, the Son's End Is No Surprise.

There was little surprise in New York at the announcement of George M. Pullman's death in San Mateo, Cal., yesterday. The young man was tottering on the verge of the grave when he left this city last summer. Although not yet thirty, he had the parchment face and the halting gait of an old man. Pneumonia seized him and destroyed his weakened vitality as heat melts the snow.

In the death of this young-old man—the weaker of the famous Pullman twins both in mind and body—there appears to be a lesson to young men of wealth and to indulgent millionaire fathers alike.

The career of George M. Pullman was a pitiful failure. The question is whether or not much of the fault rested with the loving father and the doting mother. In the history of American industry there is no more sturdy figure than that of the elder George M. Pullman. When death came to him four years ago he was an old man, but vigorous, full of honors and with a life record that was clean.

That such a father should have been in any measure responsible for two such boys as the Pullman twins is a thought-compelling commentary upon our strenuous life.

Soon Made His Mark.

The elder Pullman was born in this State. He was a country boy, but farm life was not for him. Early in life he went to Chicago, then a swarming but lusty infant among American cities. By untiring industry and the exercise of a powerful business intellect he made his mark with a short time.

It was he who first conquered the swampy soil of Chicago in the interest of tall buildings. In those days a building seven stories high was considered a monster.

Experienced men said that the boggy foundation of the city would not stand such a weight. Mr. Pullman showed that it would, and thus laid the foundation for his millions.

His beginning as a sleeping-car magnate was characteristic. He manufactured one sleeping-car and after tireless persuasion got the permission of a railroad to try it.

He stood in the railway station in Chicago and personally solicited the patronage of passengers. If they were not suited, he said, he would give them their $3 back. These methods gained attention, travellers found the sleeping-cars a boon and George M. Pullman built his millions.

Great factories arose in South Chicago, and in these sleeping cars, palace cars, all sorts of cars were turned out. Built towns for workmen.

George M. Pullman built a town for his employees. He founded a technical school and gave largely to charity. In all his business career he made not one single mistake, when it is looked upon from a material standpoint.

But this unerring business sense deserted him when he assumed the responsibility of rearing his twin boys. His whole life was wrapped up in them. He determined that he would mould them to his own mind and make them worthy successors to his honored name and his tremendous fortune.

They were not sent to school in their early youth. The society of ordinary boys was not good enough for them. The sturdy father, who had grown up barefooted and with a rudimentary education, hired a tutor for his twin boys. They were kept secluded and their every wish was gratified.

As a natural result, the twins became the terrors of the neighborhood. They did as they pleased. Their pin money was out of all proportion to their needs. While still in knickerbockers they were promoters of bull-dog fights.

The household atmosphere in which the boys lived forced their bad instincts. At an age when the average youth is beginning to note with mixed alarm and gratification that his voice is getting coarse the Pullman twins were riding on the backs of their father's horses.

$18,000,000 IN CHRISTMAS GIFTS.

FOR STOCKHOLDERS IN INDUSTRIAL CORPORATIONS.

Stockholders in industrial corporations will receive as Christmas presents dividends of $18,000,000.

More than two-thirds of this total will go to the holders of stock in the Standard Oil Company and the United States Steel Trust.

They will jointly disburse among their stockholders the sum of $12,833,638.

Holders of industrial stocks have fared very well during the year. December's output swelling the total of dividends paid on these stocks during the twelve months to $238,530,633.

Railroad companies will also pay out about $7,500,000 in dividends during December.

Dr. Nansen's Peculiarities.

(From the Chicago Journal.) Dr. Nansen has a liking for bright colors. That is why his ship, the Fram, was painted green, gray, scarlet, and white, picked out with gold. The explorer is a clever artist and a lover of music—of his wife's singing especially—but he does not care for so-called "artistic" furniture. The table at which he does all his work when at home at his place at Lysaker, six miles from Christiania, is merely a huge kitchen table.

ing around Chicago in cabs filled with champagne bottles.

Both at Tail of Class. They were sent to a Harvard training school. There were 115 boys in the class. Sanger Pullman stood 115th and George M. Pullman 145th when the examination papers were sifted. The stay of the twins at Harvard was brief, but what they did to Cambridge is talked about there to this day.

Even the experience of the boys at Harvard did not serve to open the eyes of the father. He sent them to a private school at Pottstown, Pa., in a private car. They remained there one term, the most thoroughly despised boys in the school.

Their wealth was unlimited, they were arrogant and overbearing men of the world in temperament in a school of fresh-minded boys. The experience did them no good.

Returning to Chicago, they were informed by Mr. Pullman that they must go to work. Sanger was attending the law, and his brother was known to remain in one place of employment as long as three months.

Young George fitted from job to job, and finally both gave up trying to make a living. They devoted their time to scandalizing Chicago. In all truth, Chicago is a hard town to scandalize, but the Pullman twins did the job most effectually.

Both Became Enraged. When Mr. Pullman died four years ago George M. Pullman was engaged to Miss Polite Oglesby, the daughter of "Dick" Oglesby, a politician, war hero of the West. She was a sweet girl, intelligent, and a good housewife.

Sanger Pullman was engaged to Miss Lynn Fernald, the daughter of a Chicago merchant, who had been a lifelong friend of the elder Pullman. Just before his death Mr. Pullman came to a realising sense of his mistake in rearing his boys. He cut them out with $3000 a year each, to be increased when they showed signs of taking care of themselves and money.

The engagement between George M. Pullman and Miss Oglesby was broken off at the news of the disinheriting of the young men. George became engaged to a young woman who afterward married Frederick V. Bowers, the song writer. This engagement was broken off and George secretly married Miss Fernald, the fiancée of his brother. This was in August, 1898.

Sanger forgave his brother and the boys began to go to the old place. Their mother showed them all the money they wanted, and when she did not allow them money they ran up bills and she paid them.

Associated with Hostlers. They lived in Long Branch in the summer of 1898, associating largely with coachmen and hostlers.

Mrs. Pullman did not live long with her young husband. She went home to Chicago and remained there. In the fall of 1899 George M. Pullman killed a White Plains and announced his intention of living down the past and becoming a Chicago citizen.

With the liquor out of his system he went back to Chicago and got a job tracing mislaid sleeping-cars. While in Chicago he met his old flame, then Mrs. Frederick V. Bowers.

Early in 1900 he appeared at the Hotel Gerard. In this city, with Mrs. Bowers, he registered as George M. Pullman and wife. The pair lived there for some months and spent the summer at the seashore.

After a time they tired of each other and separated. Bowers sued his wife for divorce and sued young Pullman for $50,000. Out in Chicago Mrs. Pullman brought suit for divorce, counsel fees and alimony.

Pullman floated serenely through all this. He had taken up all of his old bad habits and they were selling him. Sanger went to California and married a Miss West, a school teacher and one of three beautiful sisters.

Final, Brief Chapter. George, left without the society of his brother, who was to some extent a restraining influence, went from bad to worse. Finally his condition became such that he was compelled to go to California. He became the guest of

The Wanamaker Store Men's $15 SUITS AT $10

Thousands of men know the incomparable value of our Fifteen Dollar Fancy Cheviot Sack Suits, and when a stock clean-up brings the chance to buy them at ten dollars, a better bargain in clothing can scarcely be imagined. Good luck for the man who has a Winter Suit still to buy.

While this group is a collection of odd sizes, still the bringing together of about a hundred and fifty suits, makes an excellent assortment of sizes. Then we have added a number of twelve dollar suits to the group, so if a man can't find just what he wants among the fifteen dollar values, he can at least get one of our superb twelve dollar suits for $10.

It is a most exceptional offering of Men's Clothes.

85c Fancy Waist Flannels At 65c a Yard

The present season has shown an increased demand for Fancy Waist Flannels, and manufacturers have had a hard time to keep up with their orders.

Hence this offering of a quality worth 85c, at 65c a Yard is more than timely—it's wonderful. Your opportunity springs from the shrewdness of a maker, who, when he found himself unable to turn out the much-wanted fabric fast enough, bought up a stock of plain flannel and plaited and corded it in the attractive styles in which it is offered to you today. Every third plait has a mercerized cord in Persian design or black-and-white. These are the colors:

Cardinal with Persian cord; Cardinal with black-and-white cord; Royal Blue with black-and-white cord; Old Rose with black-and-white cord; Reseda with black; and white cord; Navy Blue with black-and-white cord; Black with Persian cord; Heliotrope with Persian cord; Heliotrope with black-and-white cord.
